The UCLA Public Health Scholars Training Program provides undergraduate students the opportunity to explore public health through hands-on training, workshops, and leadership and professional development.

2018 Program Overview

- 8-week summer training program (June 24 - August 17, 2018)
- Internship with a partner organization in Los Angeles
- $3,000 stipend, housing, some meals, and a metro pass
- Paid trip to Centers for Disease Control and Prevention in Atlanta, Georgia with Public Health Scholars from other programs across the nation

Program Eligibility Criteria

- Interest in exploring a career in public health
- By the start of the program, scholars must (1) be enrolled in a four year institution and completed two years of undergraduate education (community college transfers eligible) OR (2) have earned an undergraduate degree within 12 months
- No GPA requirement

Interested?
Contact: Lindsay Rice, Program Manager
phscholars@ph.ucla.edu
310-206-3526

Applications Open Mid-November | Application Deadline January 31, 2018