Sonoma State University Professor Emeritus Dr. Gerald Haslam grew up in Oildale, studied at BC in the mid-1950s and early 1960s, and went on to become an educator and a prolific writer. He has published novels, essay collections, and historical manuscripts about the Central Valley and its cultures, and he has contributed to news media such as the Los Angeles Times Sunday magazine, KQED’s California Report, and the Sacramento Bee.

Join us for this inaugural event for our National Endowment for the Humanities grant, Energizing Humanities in California’s San Joaquin Valley. This special gathering is co-sponsored by the NEH, BC Social Justice Institute, and the Levan Center for Humanities.
