A CLEARER PATH TO STUDENT SUCCESS
A WELCOME
FROM DR. SONYA CHRISTIAN

Let's seize the day.....

In California, the legislature and chancellor's office are "all-in" with both funding and expectations, and as never before, we are focused on student completion, student success, and student equity. Our work and outcomes are more visible than ever before, illuminated by a flood of data – success rates, placement scores, multiple measures, scorecards, disproportionate impact, in 60 units or less. And then, there is the Associate Degree transfer legislation. A lot happening in California. What an opportunity!

"Redesigning America's Community Colleges: A Clearer Path to Student Success" is written for educators -- a thinking person's invitation to meeting our challenges with relentless clarity. Six chapters by Bailey, Jaggars and Jenkins present a practical survey and distillation of work that ranges from the economics of curricular redesign to the cognitive science of default decisions, from the challenge of serving the unprepared to the politics of committee structures. They deal with it all.

Chapter three is on "Rethinking Student Instruction" and briefly touches on the skills, concepts and habits of mind essential for students, learning how to think and learning how to learn. But as much as anything the authors model for us the skills, concepts and habits of mind essential for us - the spirit of inquiry, and the willingness to adapt and change if it improves student learning.

The thesis of the book is surprisingly direct: reaching the levels of student success we all hope to achieve will not come without reimagining and reintegrating the full breadth of the community college experience.

While the words are simple, the gauntlet that authors Bailey, Jaggars and Jenkins throw down is not. Redesigning America's Community Colleges tackles all aspects of community college operations, from instruction to budgeting to personnel to processes -- and none of the advocated changes will come without some measure of blood, sweat, tears, and sleepless nights on all of our parts.

Through their work, the authors have triggered a wave of energy, a mindful re-visioning of how we support student success, at Bakersfield College and on other college campuses across the nation. It is in this spirit that I welcome all of you to this summit at Bakersfield College.

Let's seize the day!
• What were your main takeaways from today?
• What about the guided pathways approach might be good for your college?
• What are you currently doing that a guided pathways effort might build on or help to tie together?
• What are you going to do to take this back to folks on your campus?
• What questions and concerns do you still have about guided pathways?
Wanna MC the pathways state-wide summit on Feb. 18th?

Sorry, I just got out of class. I think perhaps you meant this text for Jen? Her number is....
